JetBlue pilot charged with buying heroin at Boston Common

A JetBlue pilot pleaded not guilty Monday to allegedly possessing heroin at Boston Common on Sunday evening.

John Manwaring, 42, of Florida was one of six people arrested near the Boylston Street green line stop after police witnessed what they believed to be a drug deal.

"[Manwaring] was removed from duty last night pending the outcome of this investigation," JetBlue said in an email, adding that it rigorously tests crew members for drugs. METRO

Cops seek help to locate car connected with South End killing

Boston police are asking for help locating a car that they believe was involved in the murder of a man in his early 20s early Saturday morning in the South End.

Police said local car rental companies should be on alert for any returned cars that match that description. METRO

#Boston4Gaza protesters to march for peace on Copley Square

Hundreds of demonstrators are expected to march from Copley Square to the state House on Tuesday evening to speak out against what organizers describe as ongoing Israeli attacks on the Gaza Strip since July 8.

Fair trial

A juror speaks out

Juror Daniel Antonino, 49, of Duxbury, said he believes Tazhayakov got a fair trial.

"They took materials from that room that they should never have touched, and that's what he is going to pay the price for," said Antonino. "That backpack was simply taken and discarded like they were getting rid of evidence."

Antonino said that as of

Monday morning, there was one undecided juror who was swayed by Tazhayakov's characterization as a passive "mama's boy," a persona given to him by defense attorneys.

In the end, the jury was able to come to a unanimous decision.

old, but said that he's "not in a good way."

"It's a brutal day for all of us," said defense attorney Matthew Myers.

"It's difficult to try a case in this culture," he said, referring to Boston as a "bombed city."

The jury began deliberations on Wednesday after six days of testimony. In their closing arguments, the prosecutors and defense attorneys painted conflicting portraits of Tazhayakov.

U.S. Attorney for the District of Massachusetts Carmen Ortiz spoke briefly with reporters and said she was "tremendously gratified" by the jury's however his mother wept loudly in the courtroom.

Tazhayakov's defense lawyers said they planned to appeal the verdict and described their client as a strong 20-year-decision. Ortiz's office is still moving toward prosecuting two more of Tsarnaev's friends — Dias Kadyrbayev and Robel Phillipos — in connection with the obstruction case.

Defense attorney Nicholas Wooldridge predicted a difficult road ahead for the other suspects.

"If [Tazhayakov] had a difficult time here, everyone is going to have a much worse time because [Tazhayakov] had the most facts," said Wooldridge.

FBI Special Agent in Charge of the Boston Division Vincent Lisi said he was also pleased with the verdict considering the work that went into the marathon bombing investigation.

"There was a tremendous amount of hard work and effort that went in this," he said. "When you get a verdict like this it gives you a tremendous amount of satisfaction."

Tazhayakov faces a maximum 20-year prison sentence on the obstruction of justice charge, and up to five years in prison on the conspiracy charge. Sentencing is scheduled for Oct. 16.

East Boston arson suspect pleads not guilty

An East Boston man pleaded not guilty on Monday to allegedly setting a fire in an alley that spread to a building, causing thousands of dollars in damage.

John Cherry was ordered held on $1,000 bail during his arraignment for a charge of arson of a dwelling, according to the Suffolk district attorney's office.

Boston police and fire responded to 26 Falcon St. just after 3:30 p.m. Sunday. A fire appeared to have started in an open trash bag in an alleyway. It was placed near a broken basement window and spread to the building's exterior. It caused $5,000 in damage.

Authorities said they recovered video surveillance that shows Cherry walking to and from the alley moments before the fire started. METRO

Ways to prove your career expertise

I've made millions trading stocks, but have made millions more by teaching others how to trade stocks. It's a beautiful thing to pass down your expertise, but in today's cluttered world, how can you prove yourself and gain influence? Here are three tips for proving your expertise:

Saying 'I Don't Know'

Don't do it. Most people are confused about one thing or another and they want someone with definitive answers. I don't want you to lie about knowing something when you truly don't know, but if you want to be taken seriously and have clout, simply point the confused person in the direction of what you actually do know.

Nobody knows everything, but most of us are experts at certain topics so it's your job to show that. Make sure others know about your experience and knowledge by shifting every situation and every conversation to what you know and what suits you best.

Social proof

Just because you think you're great and talented at something does not mean anyone else will — you have to prove it in a very public fashion. Thanks to the Internet, everyone — no matter his or her background, education or net worth — has the ability to

Up: Facebook is testing a "buy" button to compete against Amazon, making it even easier to buy everything you want.

Down: War in the Middle East is not good — violence never solves anything and this conflict hurts us all.

prove himself using social media tools such as Twitter, Facebook, blogs, chat rooms and online forums.

If you want credibility, don't be afraid to speak your mind, and remember to do it convincingly and spread it as much as you can to anyone you think will listen.

On the Internet, there are many people who claim to be stock-market geniuses. I've differentiated myself by verifying my track record and earnings and continually making enough calls that people know my success is not just in the past.

Testimonials

The value of your expertise is only as good as what others say about their experience working with you. Thanks to websites such as Yelp, TripAdvisor and Investimonials (a financial product-review website that I own), people and businesses are graded publicly by customers like never before. If you are going to claim your product, service or expertise is useful and worthwhile, you better be able to back it up!

I work hard to provide a quality product, so I encourage customer testimonials. Even constructive criticism helps you mold your expertise into something more useful.

What we're into this week

My new Mophie mobile phone charger now has memory built into it so I can store more videos and photos — great improvement!

Rory McIlroy and ex Caroline Wozniacki both won their tournaments over the weekend — perhaps they're more focused now that they're single.

I saw the new "Planet of the Apes" movie and was impressed by how real it seemed and how well done the movie is.

Sorry, people into Adam Levine, but he's taken

Adam Levine is off the market. The Maroon 5 singer and "Voice" judge and model Behati Prinsloo tied the knot in an "informal and lovely" ceremony in Cabo San Lucas over the weekend, according to E! News. In lieu of gifts, the couple reportedly asked their 100 or so guests to make donations to the Children's Hospital of Los Angeles. The ceremony itself was officiated by Jonah Hill. "Jonah was hysterical. He was telling so many jokes, but then in the middle would be so sweet and sincere," a source says. "He also talked about how sweet Behati is and how perfect they are for one another."

Should all things work out, Jolie will soon be directing her partner, right.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES.

Jolie's next-next film will star her and Pitt

Angelina Jolie's second film as a director, "Unbroken," is slated for Oscar season this year. But that's far away, so let's all talk about her third film as a director instead even though it doesn't yet exist. Jolie will direct herself in a romantic drama called "By the Sea" from a script that she wrote. Seems a bit selfish, honestly. And I don't want to suggest that nepotism is in play here or anything, but she cast Brad Pitt as her co-star. It'll be the first time they've acted together since "Mr. & Mrs. Smith," and it will clear the path for plenty of jokes about Pitt liking Jolie ordering him around. So we all win.

Finally! Selena Gomez weighs in on Gaza

Selena Gomez posted an Instagram image reading, "Pray for Gaza." The response from her followers was swift, picking fights with Gomez and each other and threatening to unfollow her. In response to the backlash, Gomez posted another Instagram photo, this time of some stock photo of a meditating woman with the caption, "And of course to be clear, I am not picking any sides. I am praying for peace and humanity for all!"

Books to get you through any crisis

Jobs, apartments, romantic partners and friendships rarely stay the same in your 20s and 30s. It's exhausting. To help ease the stress, we rounded up three books to help you endure whatever transition you're currently going through. EMILY LAURENCE

'The 20-Something Guide to Getting It Together'

by Mary Traina

If you find yourself relating a little bit too much to "Girls" or you feel like every area of your life is a mess, pick up this book. It will help you get more in control by helping you figure out who to date, how to move up in your career, get out of debt and weed out bad friends. Mary Traina, who is a blogger for HelloGiggles, addresses all of these topics using tons of pop-culture references and sample scenarios that are actually relatable.

The marriage crisis

'After I Do'

by Taylor Jenkins Reid

Heading to the Self-Help section looking for a book to save your marriage is just sad, so find the answers by reading Taylor Jenkins Reid's smart new novel, "After I Do," instead. In this book, a couple decides to take a year off from their marriage without having any contact at all with the other person. This book allows you to imagine what it would be like spending a year away from your spouse, which in turn may help you decide what to do.

The friendship crisis

'Nantucket Sisters'

by Nancy Thayer

Sometimes it helps to get lost in someone else's friendship drama to get perspective on your own BFF battle. Parents reveal shocking secrets

What's yours? A new Tumblr gives moms and dads a safe place to voice their fears.

Brooklyn mom Julia Fierro knows what you're thinking. As the creator of the Tumblr "Parenting Confessional," she's been privy to the inner thoughts of parents who wouldn't dare say what they're thinking out loud, but willing to reveal their secrets anonymously. She's also the author of the new novel, "Cutting Teeth," about a group of couples who go on vacation together, carting their young kids along, too. Of course, these couples have secrets of their own.

Timed with the novel's release, Fierro started the Tumblr as a way for parents to share their parenting fears without worrying about being judged. Some of the messages are poignant, some are funny and some are sad. Here are just a sampling of the confessions.

Confessions

- "I love my daughter, but it burns my soul that she isn't smart."
- "I'm the grandmother of eight. I adore five of them. I think two of them are little snots. I wish one of them wasn't even related to me."
- "I have a tendency to bad-mouth my ex-husband within earshot of my 4-year-old. This week, while he was with his dad, my son told him, 'You're worthless.' I chastised him but was secretly proud."

- "I snort my son's Ritalin."
- "I love my children more than my wife. But it hurts me she loves the children more than me."
- "I'm raising an a--hole."

Bedtime barrier

"I often fall asleep with my daughter while putting her to bed so I don't have to talk to or sleep with my husband."

WHEN SCHOOLS SAY THEY OFFER STUDENT SUPPORT, WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

It could mean a lot of different things. At Bay State College it means we understand that going back to school is a big decision. And, it means we understand your concerns about succeeding at the college level. That's why, regardless of how you see yourself doing in college, we see an opportunity to help you realize your potential with a community of support.

What else does it mean? It means that admissions counselors can show off our campus, answer your questions and guide you through our selection process—even before you apply. It means helping 95 percent of this year's freshman class receive grants or scholarships that don't have to be repaid. It means personal success coordinators and a closely-knit student body that can help make America's biggest college town feel a little more like home.

In the classroom, it means a wide variety of Associates and Bachelor's degree programs in such in-demand fields as healthcare, business, fashion, criminal justice and more. No matter which program you choose, it means learning in small classes from accessible professors with real-world experience in their field. To fit your schedule, it means making classes available at night or online.

As you advance toward your degree, it means having a personal career advancement team. It means helping you write cover letters and resumes, creating mock job interviews and using social media to help you get noticed. It means internships at some of Boston's best companies and organizations to build working relationships with people that can help you find a full-time position doing what you love.

In the end, what does it all mean? It means that at Bay State College, we care as much about your comfort as we do your success. It means we're committed to providing you unmatched student support throughout your college journey. It means that going back to school doesn't mean going it alone.

In short, it means Bay State is the right choice for you.

Programs for the New Majority

Within the 21st century economy, a college degree has become increasingly viewed as an essential instrument for personal and professional advancement, economic stability, and life satisfaction. But while a college degree brings expanded professional opportunities to the individual, so too does the absence of a college degree serve as a predictor of an array of challenges.

According to the Pew Research Center's 2014 analysis, the earnings disparity between adults with bachelor's degrees and those without is at its most pronounced in nearly fifty years. This widening gap exemplifies an ongoing socio-economic trend in the U.S. economy where adults lacking a bachelor's degree have become increasingly marginalized, are far more likely to live in poverty, and, if employed, are more likely to report dissatisfaction with their jobs.

While the Obama Administration's ongoing efforts to increase the number of Americans who enter and complete college directly from high school are critically important, we must not overlook the potential of the millions of current and prospective "nontraditional" students.

The growth in adult (age 25 and older) enrollment began to outpace traditional-age student enrollment in 2009, with the National Center for Education Statistics projecting the percentage increase in adult enrollment by 2020 to be 20 percent versus 11 percent for traditional age students. Despite the positive trend in adult learners, the United States, which once had the highest percentage of its population with college degrees, now lags behind Canada in the percentage of its population aged 25 to 64 with an associates degree or higher (43% vs. 38%).

In order to help the "new majority" student of the 21st century gain the qualifications and training they need, institutions of higher education must continue to develop and expand educational opportunities that are responsive to the adult student experience; recognizing the logistical challenges of the adult learner while respecting the significant life experience that they bring to the classroom.

For over 40 years, Cambridge College has specialized in educating adult learners, making it one of the nation's most experienced institutions of higher education focusing on this new majority. Cambridge College's School of Undergraduate Studies opened in 1995, continuing Cambridge's emphasis on access to higher education as a means of creating a more equitable society. The School now offers six bachelor's degrees, multiple concentrations, and a certificate in medical interpreting; all designed to serve you, the new majority. Come see what makes Cambridge special. Obama to blame for crisis of child immigrants on the border

Re: 'Have a heart' (Metro, July 21) Letter writer Annie Ferris is of the opinion that those who oppose the thousands of unaccompanied children coming across the border illegally being allowed to become citizens have "hardened hearts." These kids have done nothing wrong, they only listened to their parents, but that is not an excuse to allow them to stay.

The primary reason they are coming to America is not to escape violence and poverty. Again, just because there is violence and poverty in their home country does make it the reason they came.

Guatemala has always been poor and violent. The reason they are coming is because President Obama is indecisive and the media in Central America is telling their citizens now is best time to send your kids to America.

We never had this problem under any other president because every other president knew how to make tough decisions other than which fundraiser to attend.

Late 'Maverick' actor Garner will be missed

James Garner was a fine actor on stage, screen and television. I enjoyed the "Maverick" TV series and in particular the 1959 episode, "The Strange Journey of Jenny Hill" in which the very popular singer Peggy King co-starred.

A solid actor who was at his best in virtually any role, be it Western or detective, comedy or drama, James Garner did it all. He will be missed.

Sox keep hopes alive

MLB. The Red Sox have yet another big opportunity to climb back into the division race.

It had been feared for the past two months that the final two months of the 2014 regular season at Fenway Park would feature glorified exhibition games for the home team. September could still very well prove to be a blah month of baseball on Yawkey Way, but the Red Sox have almost ensured that early August will at least be worth watching, given their recent, rare hot streak.

Visit Metro.us to see where Cliff Lee may be headed as the trade deadline approaches.

The Sox are 8-7 in July, but they began the month going 1-6 before winning seven of eight. This could be another severe roller-coaster stretch like the one they perfected in late May and early June when they lost 10 in a row and then won seven straight.

Typically, breaking even in a long divisional stretch is cause for celebration, but given the way the mediocre AL East stacks up this year, consecutive series against the Blue Jays, Rays, Blue Jays (again) and Yankees should be looked at as an opportunity to beat up on other "so-so" AL East squads instead of having to endure daunting neighborhood battles.

Opportunity knocks

The Red Sox are on a rare hot streak in this struggle of a season. They'll face AL East opponents nonstop for the next two weeks with a chance to gain some ground.

- The Blue Jays are just 6-9 in July while the Yankees are 9-7 so far. The division's basement dwellers, the Sox and Rays, have been the hottest teams recently with Tampa Bay having gone 11-4 in July.
- Jake Peavy (1-8, 4.59 ERA) will get the ball for the Red Sox Tuesday night, facing off against Toronto's J.A. Happ (7-5, 4.91 ERA).
- Clay Buchholz (5-5, 5.46 ERA) will start Wednesday for the Sox, with R.A. Dickey (7-10, 3.95 ERA) taking the hill for the Blue Jays.
